

QMedCourses:

Enhancing research quality with structured literature searching and referencing.

QMedCourses – www.qmedcourses.in – is an online platform for a student or professional of any health science stream to learn how to enhance research capabilities. This by acquiring special skills needed for structured, step-by-step online searching of literature, and for referencing and reference management. It is an initiative of QMed Knowledge Foundation, Mumbai – www.qmed.ngo. The Founder of QMed, Mrs Vasumathi Sriganesh is a former medical librarian with the right training and experience in structured online searching.

Why learn structured searching & referencing?

- “The quality of ingredients makes the quality of food”. The best references retrieved create the foundation for the best of research
- Saves hours of time – which can be used for the actual research & writing
- Eliminates the “cost of missing out” of any key reference – especially studies for systematic reviews

Who is this learning for?

1. Any student involved in any kind of research / learning
2. Faculty who write research publications or guide students in research
3. Practitioners who need to stay updated with relevant literature
4. Researchers who need relevant literature
5. Researchers who need exhaustive literature to write systematic / scoping reviews

Who can join QMedCourses:

- Individual students / professionals
- Institutions – for all their students and employees

Current Courses:

1. Information Resources & Literature Searching (Free)
2. Introduction to Referencing (Free)
3. Mastering PubMed
4. Reference Management with Mendeley

Additional:

- Resources for you: A library of web resources useful for online searching, medical writing, research in general and a large number of articles and references on several aspects of research and writing
- “Book an appointment” – a facility to book a zoom call for individual / small group help on searching and referencing. Very useful specially for search strategies for reviews
